Worldwide & industry news

The new generation bale netting – Scarecrow BaleNet™

Over the last five years Scarecrow Solutions has made a mark on the New Zealand agricultural, horticultural and viticulture markets for their extensive range of crop protection netting products. Specialists in nets of all kinds including bird and pest nets, hail, frost and wind protection, as well as weed matting and shade netting, Scarecrow has set new standards in UV resistant, cost effective netting solutions.

Building on this reputation, Scarecrow is bringing another innovation to the New Zealand market – a new type of bale net which is lighter, stronger, and more cost effective than the current bale net sold in the Southern hemisphere. Scarecrow is lowering baling costs in New Zealand by utilising new technology in bale net manufacturing. HDPE monofilament yarns are used in place of flat tape to construct a bale net that is both stronger and lighter as well as UV stabilised for New Zealand's harsh environment. This new development from Scarecrow is set to take over the bale netting market in New Zealand and we are proud to stand by our new product which has been tried and tested by two of New Zealand's leading contractors using John Deere and McHale balers, with perfect results.

'There are many new features that will benefit our customers. Superior strength, reinforced edges, 30 meter red warning yarns to indicate the roll end - to name a few. And the great thing is, our nets are 100% recyclable.'

what our customers say

Scarecrow have been supplying Misha's Vineyard since the initial development of the 4 row lock out net design. We find it the fastest and most efficient way of protecting our crop from bird damage while enduring the impact of high winds. Their advanced netting solution is highly durable and very strong. The design we have simply clips down after being tensioned and a side flap prevents birds entering into the rows.

We have found Scarecrow to be a very professional company providing a high quality product while giving reliable and honest service. They are happy to listen and develop new ideas to fit your requirements and their after sales service is second to none.
